

Hosea 8:11

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Because Ephraim hath made many altars to sin, altars shall be unto him to sin.

Analysis

Multiplying altars for sin: 'Because Ephraim hath made many altars to sin, altars shall be unto him to sin.' The irony: multiplying מזבחות (mizbechot, altars) לְלַחַת (lachato, to sin/for sin), they become אֶלְעֶת (lechet, for sinning). Intended for atonement, they multiply transgression. More religion produces more guilt when heart is wrong. Jesus similarly condemned Pharisaic multiplication of traditions (Matthew 15:1-9). Proliferating religious activity apart from genuine faith compounds rather than removes sin. Only Christ's once-for-all sacrifice truly atones (Hebrews 10:10-14); multiplying religious works adds nothing.

Historical Context

Jeroboam I established altars at Dan and Bethel (1 Kings 12:28-29); subsequent kings added high places throughout Israel. Archaeological excavations have uncovered numerous 8th century Israelite worship sites. Each altar/high place theoretically enabled worship, yet divorced from Jerusalem temple and proper priesthood, they facilitated syncretism. The more places established, the more corruption spread. What began as accommodation (northern accessibility) became multiplication of idolatry. This demonstrates that wrong worship multiplied remains wrong—quantity doesn't sanctify falsehood. Church history shows similar pattern: multiplying religious works apart from gospel faith produces bondage not freedom (Galatians 5:1).
