

Isaiah 1:18

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Come now, and let us reason together, saith the LORD: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool.

Analysis

This verse contains one of Scripture's most gracious invitations: 'Come now, and let us reason together.' God initiates dialogue despite rebellion, offering rational discourse rather than arbitrary decree. The promise that scarlet sins become 'white as snow' and crimson sins like 'wool' employs vivid imagery of complete cleansing. This isn't moral improvement but divine transformation—God removes sin's stain entirely through grace, anticipating the gospel's forensic justification (Romans 3:24-26).

Historical Context

In ancient dyeing, scarlet and crimson were permanent stains from costly dyes. The impossibility of removing such stains emphasizes the miraculous nature of divine forgiveness—what humans cannot accomplish, God does freely.
