

Isaiah 1:26

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And I will restore thy judges as at the first, and thy counsellors as at the beginning: afterward thou shalt be called, The city of righteousness, the faithful city.

Analysis

The promise to restore judges and counselors 'as at the first' looks back to the golden age of righteous leadership under figures like Moses, Joshua, and David, while ultimately pointing forward to Messiah's kingdom where perfect justice reigns (Isaiah 9:6-7; 11:1-5). The resulting title 'the city of righteousness, the faithful city' reverses verse 21's lament, demonstrating God's redemptive purpose. This eschatological restoration finds ultimate fulfillment in the New Jerusalem (Revelation 21:2), where God dwells with His purified people.

Historical Context

Israel's early period featured judges raised up by God (Judges 2:16) and David's righteous reign. Isaiah envisions a return to such godly leadership, fulfilled in Christ and His kingdom.
