

Isaiah 1:8

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And the daughter of Zion is left as a cottage in a vineyard, as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers, as a besieged city.

Analysis

---

Three images of isolation convey Jerusalem's vulnerability: a temporary shelter in a vineyard after harvest, a watchman's hut in a cucumber field, and a besieged city. The 'daughter of Zion' personifies Jerusalem as a vulnerable woman, emphasizing both the covenant relationship and the pathos of her abandonment. Only divine preservation prevents total destruction.

Historical Context

During Sennacherib's 701 BC invasion, 46 fortified cities fell, leaving Jerusalem isolated like a lone shelter in an empty field, miraculously preserved by God's intervention (2 Kings 19).
