

Isaiah 10:6

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

I will send him against an hypocritical nation, and against the people of my wrath will I give him a charge, to take the spoil, and to take the prey, and to tread them down like the mire of the streets.

Analysis

God commissions Assyria against 'an hypocritical nation' (Israel/Judah)—people who maintain religious forms but lack genuine faith. The three imperatives—'take the spoil,' 'take the prey,' 'tread them down'—demonstrate God's sovereign command over Assyria's actions. The phrase 'tread them down like the mire of the streets' emphasizes complete humiliation. God uses Assyria to punish covenant unfaithfulness. This shows that profession without possession, religion without reality, incurs severe judgment.

Historical Context

Despite maintaining temple worship, sacrifices, and religious festivals, Israel and Judah had abandoned genuine covenant faithfulness (Isaiah 1:10-17). Ritual continued while hearts were far from God—textbook hypocrisy. God commissioned Assyria to punish this empty religion. Sennacherib's invasion of Judah (701 BC) and Assyria's earlier conquest of Israel (722 BC) fulfilled this commission precisely.
