

Isaiah 12:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Therefore with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation.

Analysis

---

Drawing water from 'wells of salvation' with joy illustrates receiving continuous spiritual refreshment from God's saving work. Wells provide reliable, ongoing supply unlike one-time rain. 'With joy' emphasizes the gladness accompanying salvation. This imagery suggests salvation isn't one-time event only but ongoing source of spiritual sustenance. The plural 'wells' might indicate multiple aspects of salvation or abundant supply. Christ identified Himself as living water (John 4:14; 7:37-38), the ultimate well of salvation.

Historical Context

May reference water-drawing ceremonies during Feast of Tabernacles, when this passage was read. Jews would draw water from Siloam pool with joy, celebrating God's provision. Jesus attended this feast and declared Himself living water (John 7:37-38), applying this prophecy to Himself. Christian experience confirms continual drawing of spiritual refreshment from Christ, the inexhaustible well of salvation.
