

Isaiah 14:1

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For the LORD will have mercy on Jacob, and will yet choose Israel, and set them in their own land: and the strangers shall be joined with them, and they shall cleave to the house of Jacob.

Analysis

---

After judgment oracles, hope emerges: 'the Lord will have mercy on Jacob, and will yet choose Israel.' Divine mercy and election persist despite judgment. God will 'set them in their own land'—restoration after exile. Remarkably, 'strangers shall be joined with them'—Gentile inclusion in Israel's restoration. This prophesies both physical return from exile and spiritual inclusion of Gentiles in God's people. The phrase 'will yet choose' reaffirms unconditional election—God's choice of Israel isn't revoked despite their unfaithfulness.

Historical Context

Fulfilled when Jews returned from Babylonian exile (538 BC onward) and Gentiles like Rahab, Ruth, and later entire nations joined God's people through Christ. The church epitomizes this—Jews and Gentiles united as one people (Ephesians 2:11-22). The promise of restoration demonstrates covenant faithfulness—God disciplines but doesn't ultimately reject His elect. Modern Christian theology sees this ultimately fulfilled in new covenant community.
