

Isaiah 14:25

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

That I will break the Assyrian in my land, and upon my mountains tread him under foot: then shall his yoke depart from off them, and his burden depart from off their shoulders.

Analysis

'That I will break the Assyrian in my land, and upon my mountains tread him under foot: then shall his yoke depart from off them, and his burden depart from off their shoulders.' The shift from Babylon (future threat) to Assyria (immediate threat) shows God's sovereignty over all oppressors. Breaking 'the Assyrian' (singular, possibly the king or nation personified) happens 'in my land, on my mountains'—Judah, God's territory. To tread underfoot is complete defeat. Result: the yoke (symbol of servitude) and burden depart. This was fulfilled in 701 BC when 185,000 Assyrian soldiers died overnight (Isaiah 37:36) and Sennacherib withdrew. God personally defends His land and people, breaking invaders' power.

Historical Context

Assyria dominated the ancient Near East during Isaiah's ministry, conquering the northern kingdom of Israel (722 BC) and threatening Judah. Sennacherib's 701 BC invasion was defeated miraculously. One night, the angel of the LORD struck down 185,000 Assyrian soldiers; Sennacherib fled and was later assassinated by his sons (Isaiah 37:36-38). This fulfilled Isaiah's prophecy precisely: Assyria broken in Judah, its yoke removed. The Assyrian Empire never recovered its former power; within a century it fell to Babylon (612 BC). God's timing and methods (supernatural intervention) demonstrate He fights for His people.

Study Questions

1. How does God's defense of 'my land' and 'my mountains' demonstrate His covenant faithfulness to His people?
2. What does the sudden reversal (from siege to slaughter of besiegers) teach about trusting God when circumstances seem desperate?
