

Isaiah 19:13

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

The princes of Zoan are become fools, the princes of Noph are deceived; they have also seduced Egypt, even they that are the stay of the tribes thereof.

Analysis

'The princes of Zoan are become fools, the princes of Noph are deceived; they have also seduced Egypt, even they that are the stay of the tribes thereof.' Egypt's leaders aren't just wrong—they're fools who've been deceived and who deceive others. Noph (Memphis) was Egypt's ancient capital; its princes represent the nation's leadership core. The 'stay of the tribes' (cornerstone/support of provinces) indicates these leaders should provide stability but instead cause ruin. This describes leadership failure's catastrophic effect—when those responsible for guidance are themselves deceived, they lead entire nations astray. The progression from being deceived to deceiving others demonstrates sin's communicable nature—corrupted leaders corrupt followers. Reformed ecclesiology and political theology emphasize leaders' weighty responsibility, as their failures affect all under their influence (James 3:1).

Historical Context

Egyptian history during this period shows exactly this pattern—leaders making disastrous decisions based on false assessments. Encouraging Levantine rebellion against Assyria while unable to provide effective support was such a mistake—based on deceived understandings of Egyptian military capability and Assyrian weakness. These policies seduced smaller nations into rebellion that ended in their destruction. Egypt's leadership failure had international consequences, contributing to widespread suffering. Historical examples abound of leadership failures producing national disasters: wrong alliances, failed strategies, moral corruption at the top spreading downward. This validated Isaiah's diagnosis—Egypt's problem wasn't just external threats but internal leadership corruption deceiving the nation.
