

Isaiah 19:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And the land of Judah shall be a terror unto Egypt, every one that maketh mention thereof shall be afraid in himself, because of the counsel of the LORD of hosts, which he hath determined against it.

Analysis

'And the land of Judah shall be a terror unto Egypt, every one that maketh mention thereof shall be afraid in himself, because of the counsel of the LORD of hosts, which he hath determined against it.' Dramatic reversal: formerly mighty Egypt fears tiny Judah. Not because Judah is militarily superior, but because of 'the counsel of the LORD of hosts'—divine purposes associated with Judah terrify Egypt. Mere mention of Judah causes fear—Egypt recognizes God's hand protecting Judah and judging Egypt. This reversal demonstrates that God's presence determines geopolitical realities, not military or economic factors. A weak nation aligned with God's purposes becomes fearsome; a strong nation opposing God becomes terrified. This anticipates how the Church, though apparently weak, conquers mighty empires through spiritual power (Acts 17:6 —'these that have turned the world upside down').

Historical Context

This reversal was fulfilled in 701 BCE when Assyria's massive army was destroyed while besieging Jerusalem (Isaiah 37:36-37). Egypt witnessed what God did defending Judah and recognized divine power. Sennacherib's own annals tacitly acknowledge failure to conquer Jerusalem. This event had lasting impact—surrounding nations recognized Yahweh's power, and Judah's tiny size relative to Egypt became irrelevant. The principle repeated throughout history: weak believers aligned with God's purposes triumph over apparently superior opposition. Church history shows this pattern—persecuted Christians outlasting Roman Empire, missionaries conquering cultures through gospel, reformers overturning ecclesiastical corruption. Divine presence determines outcomes, not human strength.
