

Isaiah 19:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And the spirit of Egypt shall fail in the midst thereof; and I will destroy the counsel thereof: and they shall seek to the idols, and to the charmers, and to them that have familiar spirits, and to the wizards.

Analysis

'And the spirit of Egypt shall fail in the midst thereof; and I will destroy the counsel thereof: and they shall seek to the idols, and to the charmers, and to them that have familiar spirits, and to the wizards.' Egypt's 'spirit' (ruach—breath, spirit, courage, morale) fails—collective confidence collapses. God destroys their 'counsel' (etsah—plans, wisdom, strategy), indicating intellectual/planning capacity vanishes. Desperate, they multiply religious activity—consulting idols, charmers (whisperers), mediums (familiar spirits), and wizards (knowing ones). This intensified occultism demonstrates that crisis drives people toward spiritual solutions, but apart from true revelation, they grasp futile alternatives. The proliferation of sources (idols, charmers, mediums, wizards) indicates confusion and desperation—frantically seeking help everywhere except from the true God. This illustrates that false religion multiplies most when earthly securities fail.

Historical Context

Egypt was famous for magic, divination, and occult practices. Exodus depicts Egyptian magicians opposing Moses (Exodus 7-8). Egyptian papyri preserve countless spells, incantations, and magical texts. In crisis periods, such practices intensified—archaeological evidence shows increased magical papyri, amulets, and curse tablets during unstable periods. Yet none of these practices could prevent Egypt's decline. The prophecy mocks religion divorced from truth: spectacular diversity of spiritual practices accomplishing nothing. Only truth—revealed knowledge of the living God—provides genuine help. This validated Yahweh as superior to Egypt's entire magical/religious complex.

Study Questions

1. Why does crisis intensify religious activity yet often not lead to the true God?
2. What does the multiplication of spiritual sources (idols, charmers, mediums, wizards) reveal about spiritual confusion?
3. How does Egypt's futile occultism demonstrate that only true revelation provides genuine spiritual help?
