

Isaiah 2:11

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

The lofty looks of man shall be humbled, and the haughtiness of men shall be bowed down, and the LORD alone shall be exalted in that day.

Analysis

The Day of the LORD inverts human pride—lofty looks brought low, haughtiness humbled. The exclusive exaltation of Yahweh establishes monotheism's practical outcome: when God is rightly honored, human pretension is exposed. This anticipates Philippians 2:9-11 where every knee bows to Christ. The passive voice ('shall be brought down') indicates divine action, not self-humiliation.

Historical Context

In an age of imperial pride (Assyria, Egypt), Isaiah declares all human glory temporary. Only the LORD remains exalted when earthly powers crumble, a lesson Israel needed while trusting political alliances.
