

Isaiah 2:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

O house of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the light of the LORD.

Analysis

Isaiah transitions from eschatological vision to present exhortation. 'House of Jacob' emphasizes covenant identity, calling Israel to live according to their future hope. 'Walk in the light of the LORD' contrasts with darkness of sin and judgment. This present-tense application makes eschatology practical—future glory should transform current conduct, a pattern Paul also employs (Romans 13:11-14).

Historical Context

The call to walk in light while surrounded by darkness required countercultural faithfulness. Rather than conforming to surrounding nations' idolatry, Israel should live according to their distinct calling.
