

Isaiah 2:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Their land also is full of silver and gold, neither is there any end of their treasures; their land is also full of horses, neither is there any end of their chariots:

Analysis

The accumulation of silver, gold, horses, and chariots represents trust in wealth and military might rather than God (cf. Deuteronomy 17:16-17). The phrase 'neither is there any end' suggests insatiable acquisition, violating contentment and dependence on divine providence. This materialism and militarism reveal functional atheism—living as though security and significance derive from material resources. Jesus later warns that no one can serve both God and mammon (Matthew 6:24), and James indicts hoarding as evidence of misplaced trust (James 5:1-3).

Historical Context

Prosperity under Uzziah and Jotham fostered economic expansion and military buildup. While not inherently sinful, these became idolatrous when they displaced reliance on God, violating Deuteronomic warnings against royal excess.
