

Isaiah 24:9

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

They shall not drink wine with a song; strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it.

Analysis

They shall not drink wine with a song—the normal accompaniment of wine-drinking with singing (Isa 5:11-12, Amos 6:5-6) ceases. Wine (yayin, יַיִן), typically a blessing, becomes unavailable for festivity. The phrase ba-shir (בָּשִׁיר, "with a song") indicates that even if wine were available, joy would be absent—sorrow has swallowed celebration.

Strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it—shekar (שֵׁקָר, "strong drink," fermented beverage from grain or dates) turns mar (מָר, "bitter") to its consumers (shotav, שֹׁתָּב). This reversal echoes Exodus 15:23 where Marah's bitter water became sweet, but here sweet drink becomes bitter—blessing transforms to curse. The bitterness likely reflects both physical deprivation (drink adulterated or spoiled) and psychological anguish—guilt and judgment make even pleasant things taste bitter. Revelation 8:11 depicts similar judgment when waters become wormwood, bitter and deadly.

Historical Context

Wine and strong drink were staples in ancient Near Eastern diet and celebration. 'Strong drink' (shekar) denoted fermented beverages distinct from grape wine—beer from barley, date wine, and other intoxicants. These were consumed at festivals, banquets, and religious celebrations. Isaiah elsewhere condemns those who pursue strong drink from morning to night (5:11, 28:7), suggesting overindulgence disconnected from covenant fidelity. Judgment reverses blessing—what once brought pleasure now brings bitterness.
