

Isaiah 3:11

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Woe unto the wicked! it shall be ill with him: for the reward of his hands shall be given him.

Analysis

The contrasting 'woe unto the wicked' establishes the principle of divine retribution. The parallelism with verse 10 emphasizes individual accountability—each person receives according to their deeds. The phrase 'given him' indicates divine justice ensures appropriate consequences. This dual outcome (blessing/curse) reflects the covenant structure Moses established (Deuteronomy 28-30).

Historical Context

Ancient covenant structures always included blessings for obedience and curses for disobedience. Isaiah applies this pattern individually, not just corporately, emphasizing personal faith's importance.

Study Questions

1. How does certainty about future judgment motivate present faithfulness?
2. What does it mean that Christ bore the 'reward of His hands' that should have fallen on believers?
