

Isaiah 30:20

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And though the Lord give you the bread of adversity, and the water of affliction, yet shall not thy teachers be removed into a corner any more, but thine eyes shall see thy teachers:

Analysis

Though the Lord give you the bread of adversity, and the water of affliction (לֶחֶם צָר וּמַיִם לַחַטֵּף/lechem tzar umayim lachatz)—Bread and water were prison rations (1 Kings 22:27), the bare minimum for survival. Tzar means distress, narrow straits; lachatz means oppression, pressure. God permits affliction as discipline, not abandonment—the exile is coming, but it serves redemptive purposes.

Yet shall not thy teachers be removed into a corner any more—The Hebrew moreka (מוֹרֵכָה) is singular: "your Teacher," possibly referring to God himself as Israel's instructor, or to prophets/priests. They will no longer be hidden or silenced. But thine eyes shall see thy teachers—direct access to divine instruction returns. This anticipates the New Covenant promise: "they shall all know me" (Jeremiah 31:34) and the Spirit as teacher (John 14:26).

Historical Context

During the exile, Israel lost access to temple worship and normal religious instruction. False prophets had silenced true teachers (Isaiah 30:10-11). This promise assured that after judgment, true spiritual instruction would be restored. Historically, this came through Ezra's teaching ministry (Nehemiah 8), but ultimately through Christ, the Teacher, and the Spirit's illumination.
