

Isaiah 33:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

At the noise of the tumult the people fled; at the lifting up of thyself the nations were scattered.

Analysis

At the noise of the tumult the people fled (מִקְולׁ הַמּוֹן גָּדוֹ עָמִים, miqol hamon nadedu ammim)—at the קָולׁ (qol, voice, noise) of הַמּוֹן (hamon, tumult, roar, multitude) the עָמִים (ammim, peoples) fled (נָדָד, nadad, flee, wander, retreat). At the lifting up of thyself the nations were scattered (מִרְוָמְמַתְךָ נָפָצּוּ גּוֹיִם, meromemutekha nafs'u goyim)—when You lifted Yourself up (רָום, rom, be exalted), גּוֹיִם (goyim, nations) were scattered (נָפָץ, nafats, scattered, dispersed).

God's response to prayer (v. 2): He arises, and enemies scatter. The 'noise of tumult' may be thunder (theophanic manifestation) or simply divine presence causing terror. Psalm 68:1: 'Let God arise, let his enemies be scattered.' When God 'lifts Himself up' (רָוםָת, romem, exalts Himself), nations flee. The Assyrians experienced this—overnight catastrophe sent them fleeing (Isaiah 37:36-37). No battle was fought; God alone won victory. Psalm 46:6: 'He uttered his voice, the earth melted.'

Historical Context

Ancient warfare depended on maintaining army morale. Sudden panic could cause entire armies to flee (Judges 7:21-22, 2 Kings 7:6-7). When God struck 185,000 Assyrian soldiers dead, the survivors fled in terror. Sennacherib's hasty retreat to Nineveh (Isaiah 37:37) fulfilled this prophecy—at God's lifting up, the mighty nation scattered. No human army defeated them; divine intervention did.
