

Isaiah 37:18

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Of a truth, LORD, the kings of Assyria have laid waste all the nations, and their countries,

Analysis

The acknowledgment "Of a truth, LORD, the kings of Assyria have laid waste all the nations" is remarkably honest—Hezekiah admits Sennacherib's claims are factually accurate. This confession shows mature faith doesn't require denying reality or pretending circumstances aren't dire. Recognizing the enemy's genuine power makes the subsequent trust in God's greater power more meaningful. Faith built on illusion isn't faith; faith built on acknowledging hard truth but trusting God anyway is genuine.

Historical Context

Assyrian military success was undeniable historical fact. Hezekiah doesn't try to minimize Assyria's real accomplishments, making his faith more impressive.

Study Questions

1. How does honest acknowledgment of difficulties demonstrate mature faith rather than weak faith?

2. Why is it important not to minimize real threats when bringing them to God?
3. What is the difference between faith and denial of reality?
