

Isaiah 37:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And they said unto him, Thus saith Hezekiah, This day is a day of trouble, and of rebuke, and of blasphemy: for the children are come to the birth, and there is not strength to bring forth.

Analysis

The message "This day is a day of trouble, and of rebuke, and of blasphemy" accurately diagnoses the situation's spiritual dimension. The metaphor "children are come to the birth, and there is not strength to bring forth" depicts hopeless desperation—life is near but impossible to achieve without intervention. This vivid imagery shows Hezekiah recognizes Judah's complete inability to save themselves. Acknowledging utter helplessness is prerequisite for receiving God's miraculous deliverance. The admission of weakness demonstrates mature faith.

Historical Context

Childbirth without strength to deliver meant certain death in the ancient world. This metaphor communicated desperate extremity to Isaiah.
