

Isaiah 37:31

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And the remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah shall again take root downward, and bear fruit upward:

Analysis

The metaphor "the remnant that is escaped...shall again take root downward, and bear fruit upward" uses agricultural imagery for spiritual reality. Deep roots represent firm foundation in God's promises; upward fruit represents visible blessing. This promise assures that despite devastation, the remnant will not just survive but thrive. The vertical metaphor emphasizes both hidden depth (relationship with God) and visible growth (observable blessing). Judah's future depends on spiritual depth, not merely escaping immediate danger.

Historical Context

After Assyria destroyed most of Judah, only Jerusalem and a few cities remained. God promises this remnant will become foundation for restored nation.
