

Isaiah 37:32

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant, and they that escape out of mount Zion: the zeal of the LORD of hosts shall do this.

Analysis

The promise "out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant" identifies the city as source of renewal. The parallel "out of mount Zion...they that escape" uses Zion (temple mount) to emphasize spiritual center of restoration. The declaration "the zeal of the LORD of hosts shall do this" attributes everything to divine initiative, not human effort. God's "zeal" (Hebrew qin'ah) indicates passionate commitment to His purposes. This assures that restoration isn't uncertain—God's jealous love for His people guarantees it.

Historical Context

Mount Zion as God's dwelling place (Psalm 132:13-14) made it the appropriate source for spiritual renewal. God's presence there guaranteed blessing would flow from Jerusalem.

Study Questions

1. How does God's zeal for His people assure the certainty of His promises?
2. What does it mean that renewal comes from God's initiative rather than human effort?
3. How should God's passionate commitment to His purposes encourage our faith?
