

Isaiah 40:4

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low: and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain:

Analysis

This verse employs dramatic topographical language to depict the removal of obstacles to God's coming. The leveling of mountains and valleys symbolizes the removal of all impediments—human pride (mountains) and despair (valleys)—that prevent encounter with God. John the Baptist applied this verse to his ministry of spiritual preparation for Messiah's coming (Luke 3:4-5).

Historical Context

Ancient royal roads were literally prepared by leveling terrain before a monarch's arrival. This imagery would resonate powerfully with exiles anticipating their return journey from Babylon through wilderness terrain.

Study Questions

1. What mountains of pride or valleys of despair need leveling in your life to prepare for God's work?

2. How does God's coming require preparation of the heart, not just external reformation?
