

Isaiah 42:18

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Hear, ye deaf; and look, ye blind, that ye may see.

Analysis

God commands the deaf to hear and blind to look—a paradoxical call to those incapable without divine intervention. This emphasizes that only God can open deaf ears and blind eyes. The imperatives demand response while acknowledging dependence on God's enabling grace.

Historical Context

This addresses Israel's spiritual condition—though given the Law and prophets, they remained deaf and blind until God opened their understanding. It anticipates the Spirit's illuminating work.
