

Isaiah 43:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For I am the LORD thy God, the Holy One of Israel, thy Saviour: I gave Egypt for thy ransom, Ethiopia and Seba for thee.

Analysis

For I am the LORD thy God, the Holy One of Israel, thy Saviour. This verse unveils God's covenant faithfulness through three divine titles. The Hebrew YHWH Elohim (LORD thy God) emphasizes personal relationship within covenant, while Qedosh Yisrael (Holy One of Israel) maintains God's transcendent otherness even in intimacy. The title moshia' (Saviour) points to God's active deliverance, a theme fulfilled supremely in Christ.

The phrase "I gave Egypt for thy ransom" employs the Hebrew kopher (ransom, covering), a legal term for substitutionary payment. God providentially orchestrated Cyrus's conquest of Egypt, Ethiopia, and Seba (modern Sudan and Yemen) as part of the geopolitical arrangements enabling Israel's return from exile. This historical ransom foreshadows the ultimate ransom of Christ's blood (Mark 10:45, 1 Peter 1:18-19).

From a Reformed perspective, this demonstrates God's sovereign grace in election - Israel did not earn redemption but received it as unmerited favor. God values His chosen people so highly that nations serve as ransom payment. This prefigures the New Covenant where Christ's precious blood ransoms an elect people from every nation (Revelation 5:9).

Historical Context

This prophecy was delivered during the Babylonian exile (586-538 BC) when Israel faced national extinction. The reference to Egypt, Ethiopia, and Seba as ransom relates to historical events during Cyrus the Great's conquests (539-525 BC). Persia's expansion into North Africa occurred concurrently with Israel's restoration, suggesting divine providence orchestrated international politics for covenant purposes. Ancient Near Eastern law recognized substitutionary ransom (kopher) as a legal mechanism, which Isaiah applies theologically to God's redemptive work.

Study Questions

1. How does God's willingness to give nations as ransom for Israel deepen your understanding of His valuation of the elect?
2. In what ways does this Old Testament ransom foreshadow the infinite worth of Christ's atoning sacrifice?
3. How should recognizing yourself as 'precious' and 'honoured' in God's sight (v. 4) shape your identity and purpose?
