

Isaiah 45:8

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down righteousness: let the earth open, and let them bring forth salvation, and let righteousness spring up together; I the LORD have created it.

Analysis

Heaven is called to 'drop down' (nataph - distill like dew) righteousness, and skies to 'pour down' (nazal - flow like streams). Earth should open and 'bring forth salvation' while 'righteousness spring up together.' This cosmic imagery presents salvation as both heavenly gift and earthly response. The LORD creates it.

Historical Context

This poetic vision anticipates the new creation where righteousness characterizes all reality. The language echoes creation narratives while pointing to redemption's cosmic scope.

Study Questions

1. How is salvation both a gift from above and a response from below?
2. What does it mean that God creates righteousness and salvation rather than merely rewarding them?
