

Isaiah 47:10

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For thou hast trusted in thy wickedness: thou hast said, None seeth me. Thy wisdom and thy knowledge, it hath perverted thee; and thou hast said in thine heart, I am, and none else beside me.

Analysis

The accusation 'thy wisdom and thy knowledge, it hath perverted thee' shows that human learning divorced from God becomes spiritual poison. Babylon's claim 'I am, and none else beside me' appears again, showing how intellectual pride leads to practical atheism. This warns against all humanistic education that excludes God - knowledge without fear of the Lord is folly (Proverbs 1:7).

Historical Context

Babylon pioneered mathematics, astronomy, medicine, and literature - genuine achievements that bred arrogance. The same learning that developed early civilization became the means of mocking God's people and trusting in human achievement.
