

Isaiah 58:13

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

If thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the sabbath a delight, the holy of the LORD, honourable; and shalt honour him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words:

Analysis

The conditional promise 'If thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day' establishes that Sabbath-keeping requires intentional restraint from pursuing personal agenda. The call to make Sabbath a 'delight' rather than burden transforms duty to joy. The promise 'then shalt thou delight thyself in the LORD' shows that Sabbath properly observed deepens intimacy with God, not mere external compliance.

Historical Context

Sabbath-breaking was chronic issue for Israel (Nehemiah 13:15-22), indicating deeper heart problem - preferring personal pleasure over God's appointed rest. Jesus clarified Sabbath's purpose (Mark 2:27 - 'made for man'), showing it's gracious gift, not legalistic burden.
