

Isaiah 60:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Then thou shalt see, and flow together, and thine heart shall fear, and be enlarged; because the abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee, the forces of the Gentiles shall come unto thee.

Analysis

The response to this vision is profoundly emotional: "Then thou shalt see, and flow together, and thine heart shall fear, and be enlarged." Four verbs describe Zion's reaction. "Flow together" (nahar) literally means to shine or beam—radiant joy. "Fear" (pachad) indicates reverential awe at God's work. "Be enlarged" (rachab) means expanding to capacity—overwhelming joy. The reason follows: "because the abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee, the forces of the Gentiles shall come unto thee." The "abundance of the sea" likely refers to maritime trade wealth and island nations (coastlands). "Forces" (chayil) means wealth, resources, and might—not merely people but their treasures and capabilities dedicated to God's purposes. This prophesies the Gentiles bringing their wealth and glory into the kingdom (Revelation 21:24-26). From a Reformed perspective, this illustrates the cultural mandate redeemed—human creativity, productivity, and achievement consecrated to God's glory. Christ claims not just souls but the totality of creation, transforming culture and commerce for kingdom purposes.

Historical Context

Post-exilic Judah was economically weak, depending on Persian imperial permission and resources to rebuild. This promise looked forward to reversal—instead of being tributaries to empires, they would receive tribute from nations.

Partial fulfillment came through temple donations from Gentiles (Ezra 1:4, 6:8-9), but complete fulfillment awaits the consummated kingdom when all creation acknowledges Christ's lordship (Philippians 2:10-11) and all things are reconciled to God (Colossians 1:20).
