

Isaiah 66:1

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Thus saith the LORD, The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool: where is the house that ye build unto me? and where is the place of my rest?

Analysis

God's rhetorical questions 'where is the house that ye build unto me? and where is the place of my rest?' challenge all human presumption to contain or serve God. The cosmic vision 'The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool' establishes God's transcendent greatness - no temple (even Solomon's) adequately houses Him. Yet verse 2 shows He dwells with contrite hearts - God is simultaneously transcendent and immanent.

Historical Context

Stephen quoted this in Acts 7:49-50 when challenging Jewish temple-fixation. Post-exilic focus on rebuilding temple needed this corrective - God values humble hearts over elaborate buildings. Jesus declared His body the true temple (John 2:19-21), making material structures obsolete.

Study Questions

1. How do you balance reverence for God's transcendent greatness with confidence in His immanent nearness?
2. What 'houses' (religious structures, traditions, programs) do you wrongly think contain or impress God?
