

Isaiah 66:24

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And they shall go forth, and look upon the carcases of the men that have transgressed against me: for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh.

Analysis

The book ends with sobering judgment: "And they shall go forth, and look upon the carcases of the men that have transgressed against me: for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh." The righteous witnessing the wicked's judgment is unsettling but scripturally attested. "Their worm shall not die" (tolatam lo tamut) and "their fire be quenched" (isham lo tikhbeh) describe perpetual, unending torment. Jesus quotes this verse (Mark 9:44, 46, 48) describing hell's eternal nature. "An abhorring" (dera'on) means object of horror and disgust—the righteous abhor what sin produces. From a Reformed perspective, this confirms eternal conscious punishment for the wicked. The righteous don't sadistically delight in suffering but recognize God's justice being vindicated. The contrast with verse 23 is stark: some worship eternally while others suffer eternally. This sobering conclusion emphasizes judgment's reality, motivating holiness and evangelism. God's justice, like His mercy, is eternal. The wicked face consequences that never end—a terrible truth requiring compassionate evangelistic response.

Historical Context

The Valley of Hinnom (Gehenna) outside Jerusalem, where trash burned perpetually and where children were once sacrificed to Molech, became the imagery for eternal judgment. Isaiah's audience knew this place. Jesus used the same imagery (Matthew 5:22, 29-30, 10:28, 18:9, 23:33, Mark 9:43-48, Luke 12:5), confirming hell's reality. Throughout church history, eternal judgment has been affirmed despite being unpopular. The vision of Revelation confirms it—the lake of fire where the wicked are tormented forever (Revelation 14:11, 20:10, 15). This difficult truth must not be softened—it's clearly taught in Scripture. The certainty of eternal punishment should drive evangelistic urgency and personal holiness.

Study Questions

1. How should the doctrine of eternal punishment affect our evangelistic urgency and methods?
2. What does the righteous viewing judgment teach about divine justice being vindicated?
3. How do we balance affirming hell's reality with avoiding harshness or diminishing God's mercy?
