

Isaiah 8:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And I will wait upon the LORD, that hideth his face from the house of Jacob, and I will look for him.

Analysis

Isaiah's personal resolution to wait on the Lord demonstrates faith amid divine hiddenness. 'Hideth his face' indicates God's temporary withdrawal of blessing and protection from Israel due to sin. Yet this doesn't produce despair but patient expectation: 'I will wait upon him.' The parallel 'I will look for him' emphasizes active, hopeful anticipation. This models the Reformed virtue of perseverance—continuing to trust God even when His purposes seem hidden. Faith doesn't require constant visible blessing but trusts God's character despite circumstances.

Historical Context

During the dark years of Assyrian threat and eventual devastation, God seemed absent from Israel's national life. Yet Isaiah models persistent faith, waiting for God's deliverance rather than seeking human solutions. This waiting was vindicated when God destroyed Sennacherib's army in 701 BC. More broadly, the righteous remnant 'waited' through exile until God brought restoration. Simeon and Anna (Luke 2:25-38) exemplify this same patient expectation for Messiah.
