

Isaiah 8:4

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For before the child shall have knowledge to cry, My father, and my mother, the riches of Damascus and the spoil of Samaria shall be taken away before the king of Assyria.

Analysis

The prophecy's time marker is precise: before the child reaches early speech (12-24 months), Assyria would plunder Damascus and Samaria. This specificity demonstrates God's absolute sovereignty over historical events and timelines. The 'riches of Damascus and spoil of Samaria' represents total defeat—religious, economic, and political subjugation. Assyria served as God's instrument of judgment against nations threatening His people. This illustrates the Reformed doctrine that God governs all nations and uses even pagan empires to accomplish His purposes.

Historical Context

This prophecy was fulfilled with remarkable precision. In 732 BC, Tiglath-Pileser III conquered Damascus, killing King Rezin and deporting the population (2 Kings 16:9). He also captured much of northern Israel. In 722 BC, Shalmaneser V and Sargon II completed Samaria's destruction. The 'king of Assyria' was initially Tiglath-Pileser III, later succeeded by these rulers. Assyrian annals record the immense plunder taken from these conquests, confirming Isaiah's prophecy.
