

James 2:11

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For he that said, Do not commit adultery, said also, Do not kill.
Now if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a transgressor of the law.

Analysis

For he that said, Do not commit adultery, said also, Do not kill. Now if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a transgressor of the law. He who said, "Do not commit adultery" (mē moicheusēs, μὴ μοιχεύσης) also said, "Do not kill" (mē phoneusēs, μὴ φονεύσης). If you commit no adultery yet kill, you become a lawbreaker. James ties social sins to the Decalogue, showing that partiality violates the same God who gave the commandments.

Reformed theology sees the moral law as reflecting God's character; selective obedience insults the Lawgiver. James urges holistic submission to God's Word.

Historical Context

Jewish believers revered the Ten Commandments, yet some minimized social justice commands. James connects their favoritism to the same law forbidding murder and adultery, aligning with Jesus' Sermon on the Mount that internalizes these commands.
