

James 4:12

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

There is one lawgiver, who is able to save and to destroy: who art thou that judgest another?

Analysis

There is one lawgiver, who is able to save and to destroy: who art thou that judgest another? There is one Lawgiver and Judge (nomothetēs, νομοθέτης) able to save and destroy. Who are you to judge your neighbor? James re-centers authority in God alone.

Reformed theology affirms God's sole prerogative to justify or condemn. Believers must resist arrogating divine prerogatives through harsh judgments.

Historical Context

Legal squabbles in Jewish diaspora synagogues often involved litigating status. James reminds Christians that final judgment belongs to God, discouraging factional tribunals. Paul's admonition in Romans 14 resonates.
