Analysis

Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.

Confess faults to one another and pray for one another so you may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer (energoumenē, ἐνεργούμενη) of a righteous person avails much. James links community confession, intercession, and healing.

Reformed churches value corporate repentance and intercessory prayer as means of grace.

Historical Context

House churches practiced mutual confession. This verse shaped liturgical confession and prayer meetings in the early church. It counters secrecy by promoting gospel vulnerability.
