

James 5:2

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are motheaten.

Analysis

Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are motheaten. Your riches are corrupted, garments moth-eaten. Wealth decays; luxury wardrobe rots. James emphasizes temporality of hoarded goods.

Reformed stewardship teaches that riches unused for kingdom purposes become evidence against us. Decay testifies to misplaced trust.

Historical Context

Ancient wealth was stored in grain, garments, and metals—all susceptible to decay. James paints courtroom imagery: spoiled goods will testify at judgment.
