

Jeremiah 10:14

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Every man is brutish in his knowledge: every founder is confounded by the graven image: for his molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them.

Analysis

This verse returns to idol critique: 'Every man is brutish in his knowledge.' The Hebrew nivr (נִבְרָע) indicates stupidity, senselessness; 'knowledge' (da'ath) suggests that supposed wisdom produces foolishness when directed toward idols. 'Every founder is confounded by the graven image.' The Hebrew tsaraph (צָרָפָה, metalworker, refiner) should know best that his product is mere metal—yet he worships it. 'Confounded' (hovish, הָבֵשׁ) means shamed, disappointed when expectations fail. 'For his molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them.' sheqer (שְׁקָרָב, falsehood, lie) exposes idols as deceptive non-entities. 'No breath' (ruach) confirms their lifelessness—they cannot animate themselves or respond to worship.

Historical Context

The irony intensifies: metalworkers who shape idols know the manufacturing process yet somehow believe their products possess divine power. This self-deception parallels Isaiah 44's extended satire. Archaeological evidence shows that ancient craftsmen sometimes signed or marked their idol work—they knew they made them, yet participated in their worship.

Study Questions

1. How can those who manufacture idols with their hands simultaneously believe they possess divine power?
2. What contemporary parallels exist to this self-deception about human-made objects of devotion?
