

Jeremiah 12:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But if they will not obey, I will utterly pluck up and destroy that nation, saith the LORD.

Analysis

This verse warns of judgment for refusal: 'But if they will not obey, I will utterly pluck up and destroy that nation, saith the LORD.' The conditional 'if they will not obey' (im lo yishme'u) makes the offer genuine, not automatic. 'Utterly pluck up' (natosh entosh) uses emphatic verbal construction—complete removal. 'Destroy' (abad) indicates perish, be lost. Nations who refuse the invitation to learn YHWH's ways face total destruction. The choice is binary: join God's people through faith or face judgment as God's enemies. This concludes chapter 12's movement from Jeremiah's complaint through divine response to universal invitation with warning.

Historical Context

This warning was fulfilled in various degrees for surrounding nations. Edom in particular faced complete destruction (Obadiah, Malachi 1:2-5), becoming a byword for divine judgment. The binary choice—inclusion or destruction—anticipates gospel proclamation: believe and be saved, or refuse and perish. The Old Testament already contains this universal invitation with consequences.
