

Jeremiah 12:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

If thou hast run with the footmen, and they have wearied thee, then how canst thou contend with horses? and if in the land of peace, wherein thou trustedst, they wearied thee, then how wilt thou do in the swelling of Jordan?

Analysis

This verse contains God's challenging response: 'If thou hast run with the footmen, and they have wearied thee, then how canst thou contend with horses?' Instead of answering Jeremiah's complaint, God escalates the challenge. If Anathoth's conspiracy exhausted him, how will he handle worse opposition? 'And if in the land of peace, wherein thou trustedst, they wearied thee, then how wilt thou do in the swelling of Jordan?' 'Land of peace' (erets shalom) may mean Anathoth, his hometown; 'swelling of Jordan' (ge'on haYarden) describes the flooded Jordan valley's dangerous jungle where lions lurked (49:19). Present trials are minor compared to coming challenges.

Historical Context

The Jordan's 'swelling' refers to annual flooding that created dense thickets harboring lions and other predators (Jeremiah 49:19, 50:44, Zechariah 11:3). This dangerous terrain provided apt metaphor for severe trials. God's response doesn't explain the theodicy problem but prepares Jeremiah for intensified opposition. His ministry would include imprisonment, death threats, and witnessing Jerusalem's destruction.

Study Questions

1. How does God's response challenge rather than comfort Jeremiah's complaint?
2. What does the escalating imagery (footmen to horses, peace to Jordan thickets) teach about progressive trials?
