

Jeremiah 12:6

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For even thy brethren, and the house of thy father, even they have dealt treacherously with thee; yea, they have called a multitude after thee: believe them not, though they speak fair words unto thee.

Analysis

This verse reveals family treachery: 'For even thy brethren, and the house of thy father, even they have dealt treacherously with thee.' The Hebrew achekha (אֶחָיךְ, your brothers) and beit avikha (בֵּית אֲבִיךְ, your father's house) indicate closest family. 'Dealt treacherously' (bagdu, from bagad—betray) describes covenant violation within family. 'Yea, they have called a multitude after thee.' They rallied others against Jeremiah—organizing opposition. 'Believe them not, though they speak fair words unto thee.' Even kind words conceal hostile intent. The ultimate test awaits: not strangers but family will oppose him.

Historical Context

This revelation answers verse 1's complaint by exposing deeper betrayal than Jeremiah knew. His own family participated in the Anathoth conspiracy. This fulfills Jesus' later teaching that prophetic faithfulness divides families (Matthew 10:34-36, Luke 12:51-53). The warning not to trust 'fair words' from family indicates sophisticated deception—smiles hiding murder plots.
