

Jeremiah 15:14

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And I will make thee to pass with thine enemies into a land which thou knowest not: for a fire is kindled in mine anger, which shall burn upon you.

Analysis

The consequence continues: 'And I will make thee to pass with thine enemies into a land which thou knowest not: for a fire is kindled in mine anger, which shall burn upon you.' Exile to unknown lands is threatened. The phrase 'pass with thine enemies' depicts deportation as captives. The destination—'a land which thou knowest not'—emphasizes the disorientation and trauma of forced relocation. The cause: 'a fire is kindled in mine anger.' God's wrath is active, burning against them. This anthropomorphic language ('kindled,' 'burn') emphasizes divine judgment's intensity. The Reformed doctrine of God's wrath sees it as His settled, righteous opposition to sin—not emotional instability but holy hatred of evil.

Historical Context

The Babylonian exile forcibly relocated Judeans to Mesopotamia, a foreign land with different language, culture, and climate. This dislocation fulfilled the covenant curse of exile (Deuteronomy 28:36-37, 64-68).

Study Questions

1. How does exile to unknown lands represent loss of identity and security?
2. What does the fire metaphor teach about the nature and intensity of God's wrath?
3. How should understanding God's wrath as 'kindled' against sin affect our view of its seriousness?
