

Jeremiah 16:15

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But, The LORD liveth, that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither he had driven them: and I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers.

Analysis

Despite judgment, hope appears: 'Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that it shall no more be said, The LORD liveth, that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt.' This introduces comparison between past and future redemption. The Exodus was Israel's defining redemptive event, constantly remembered in liturgy and covenant recitals. However, a future deliverance will surpass even Exodus, becoming the new primary testimony. This prophesies restoration from exile so significant it will eclipse even Egypt's exodus in Israel's memory and worship. This demonstrates God's covenant faithfulness: judgment is not final; restoration follows for the remnant.

Historical Context

After 70 years of exile, God brought a remnant back to Judah under Persian decree (Ezra, Nehemiah). This return became a 'second exodus,' though the ultimate fulfillment awaits Christ's final redemption.
