

Jeremiah 20:11

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But the LORD is with me as a mighty terrible one: therefore my persecutors shall stumble, and they shall not prevail: they shall be greatly ashamed; for they shall not prosper: their everlasting confusion shall never be forgotten.

Analysis

After expressing his anguish (vv. 7-10), Jeremiah pivots to confident trust in God's presence and power. The phrase 'mighty terrible one' (gibbor arits, גִּבּוֹר אֶרִיץ) depicts God as a warrior-champion, fearsome and invincible. The prophet declares that his persecutors will stumble and fail because the LORD fights for him. This theological certainty—that God's purposes cannot be thwarted—sustains Jeremiah through his darkest hours.

This verse demonstrates the movement from lament to trust characteristic of biblical faith. Jeremiah does not deny his suffering or suppress his emotions, but he anchors his hope in God's character and promises. The same God who called him will vindicate him. Those who oppose God's prophet oppose God Himself and will ultimately face divine judgment. This confidence is not presumption but theological conviction grounded in God's covenant faithfulness.

The New Testament applies this principle to all believers—'If God be for us, who can be against us?' (Romans 8:31). Christ promised His disciples that the gates of hell would not prevail against His church. Like Jeremiah, we may face overwhelming opposition, but ultimate victory is assured because God Himself champions our cause.

Historical Context

Jeremiah's confidence would be tested but ultimately vindicated. While he suffered imprisonment and nearly died in a cistern (chapter 38), he was rescued by Ebed-melech and survived Jerusalem's fall. His persecutors—Pashhur, Zedekiah's officials, and the false prophets who opposed him—all faced the judgment he prophesied. The Babylonian commanders even showed Jeremiah favor, allowing him to choose whether to go to Babylon or remain in Judah (39:11-12).
