

Jeremiah 23:16

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Hearken not unto the words of the prophets that prophesy unto you: they make you vain: they speak a vision of their own heart, and not out of the mouth of the LORD.

Analysis

Hearken not unto the words of the prophets that prophesy unto you: they make you vain (מְהַבְלִים הֵמָּה אֶתְכֶם, m'havlim hemmah etkhem)—the verb הָבַל (haval) means to make empty, futile, or worthless. False prophets manufacture illusions, they speak a vision of their own heart, and not out of the mouth of the LORD (חֲזוֹן לִבָּם יְדַבְּרוּ לֹא מִפִּי יְהוָה, chazon libbam y'dabberu lo mipi YHWH). The contrast is stark: human imagination (lev, 'heart') versus divine revelation (pi YHWH, 'mouth of Yahweh').

This indictment exposes the source of theological error—substituting personal preference for God's Word. The prophets didn't invent new doctrines; they repackaged popular opinion as divine oracle. Paul later warned against those who 'tickle ears' (2 Timothy 4:3). The danger isn't merely falsehood but making people hebel—empty vapor, like the book of Ecclesiastes describes worldly pursuits. False teaching doesn't just mislead; it evacuates meaning from life itself.

Historical Context

Jeremiah prophesied judgment and exile (626-586 BC), while contemporary prophets like Hananiah proclaimed imminent peace and Babylonian defeat (Jeremiah 28). The false prophets spoke what kings and people wanted to hear, maintaining their positions and popularity. Their optimistic messages contradicted God's true word through Jeremiah, creating competing claims to divine authority.
