

Jeremiah 23:21

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran: I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied.

Analysis

---

I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran (לֹא-שָׁלַחְתִּי...וְהֵם רָצוּ, lo-shalachti...v'hem ratsu)—the dual negation ('not sent...not spoken') versus dual action ('they ran...they prophesied') exposes unauthorized ministry. The verb רָץ (ruts, 'ran') suggests eager self-appointment rather than reluctant divine commission. These prophets volunteered; God's true prophets were conscripted.

Moses protested (Exodus 3-4), Jeremiah resisted (Jeremiah 1:6), Isaiah felt unworthy (Isaiah 6:5)—authentic prophets were reluctant conscripts. False prophets ran eagerly because comfortable lies require no courage. Paul insisted 'called to be an apostle' (Romans 1:1), not self-appointed. Contemporary ministry must distinguish divine sending from religious entrepreneurship.

Historical Context

Institutional prophetic guilds created professionals serving royal courts through favorable oracles. God's true prophets received direct, often traumatic commissioning. The conflict between institutional religion and authentic calling continues—compare Jesus versus Pharisees, Paul versus Judaizers.

Study Questions

1. How do you distinguish self-appointed ministry from genuine divine calling?
2. What might you be running toward in spiritual service without being sent?
3. How does eagerness to prophesy without divine commission manifest today?
