

Jeremiah 23:24

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Can any hide himself in secret places that I shall not see him?
saith the LORD. Do not I fill heaven and earth? saith the LORD.

Analysis

Can any hide himself in secret places that I shall not see him? The verb סָתַר (satar, 'hide/conceal') meets God's pervasive presence—Do not I fill heaven and earth? (אֲנִי מִלֵּא, ani male). The verb מִלֵּא ('fill') describes omnipresence throughout all reality. Heaven and earth constitute totality in Hebrew thought—God fills (not merely observes) all space.

This affirms divine omnipresence and omniscience explicitly. False prophets' secret councils and whispered lies occurred under God's direct gaze. Paul taught that in God 'we live and move and have our being' (Acts 17:28). No secret sin, hidden rebellion, or private hypocrisy escapes divine awareness. This truth either terrifies or comforts, depending on one's relationship with God.

Historical Context

False prophets likely met privately, coordinating messages and colluding with court officials away from public scrutiny. They assumed conspiracies remained hidden. Jeremiah exposes the foolishness of believing omniscient God could be deceived about secret corruption.
