

Jeremiah 26:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

If so be they will hearken, and turn every man from his evil way, that I may repent me of the evil, which I purpose to do unto them because of the evil of their doings.

Analysis

God's willingness to relent from judgment upon repentance reveals His mercy as primary motivation. The phrase 'If so be they will hearken' shows judgment is not God's desire but His response to persistent rebellion. Divine immutability doesn't mean God's actions never change; it means His character and purposes remain constant while His dealings with people respond to their choices. This reflects God's covenantal nature.

Historical Context

This sermon was delivered early in Jehoiakim's reign (609 BC), giving Judah one more opportunity to repent before the irreversible judgment prophesied later.

Study Questions

1. How does God's willingness to relent from judgment display His character?

2. What does this teach about the relationship between divine sovereignty and human responsibility?
