

Jeremiah 32:40

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And I will make an everlasting covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them, to do them good; but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me.

Analysis

God promises an 'everlasting covenant' that cannot be broken. Unlike the Mosaic covenant which Israel broke (31:32), this covenant is secured by divine initiative and power. Two key promises:

1. 'I will not turn away from them, to do them good' —God commits to perpetual beneficence toward His people
2. 'I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me'—God will work internally to secure their faithfulness.

The covenant's permanence rests on God's unchanging commitment and His transforming work in human hearts.

This is the doctrine of eternal security grounded in divine preservation. God keeps believers from falling away not by external constraint but by internal transformation. He puts His fear in our hearts—creating genuine reverence, love, and loyalty—so that we do not want to depart from Him. We persevere not because of our strength but because of His preserving grace. Philippians 1:6 says, 'He which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ.'

The everlasting nature of this covenant means no subsequent apostasy can nullify it. The Mosaic covenant could be broken; the new covenant cannot. Not because it has no conditions (faith and repentance are required), but because God Himself secures those conditions in His people. He ensures we meet the conditions by changing our hearts. This is the gospel: God saves us and keeps us saved.

Historical Context

The old covenant was conditional—'if you obey...then I will bless.' Israel repeatedly failed, breaking the covenant. The new covenant is also conditional (believers must believe), but God secures the condition through regeneration. Jesus is the covenant mediator who perfectly kept its terms on our behalf (Hebrews 8:6; 9:15). His blood ratifies the everlasting covenant, guaranteeing its permanence (Hebrews 13:20).

Study Questions

1. How does God's promise 'I will not turn away from them' provide assurance of salvation for believers?
2. What does it mean that God 'will put my fear in their hearts'—how does this internal work secure our faithfulness?
3. How does the everlasting nature of the new covenant differ from the breakable old covenant, and why does this matter for our assurance?
