

Jeremiah 32:43

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And fields shall be bought in this land, whereof ye say, It is desolate without man or beast; it is given into the hand of the Chaldeans.

Analysis

And fields shall be bought in this land (וְנִקְנָה הַשָּׂדֶה בְּאַרְץ הַזֹּאת)—normal commercial transactions resume, reversing desolation. The verb qanah (קָנָה, buy/acquire) is the same used of Jeremiah's purchase (v. 9), now generalized to all returnees. This contradicts the people's despairing assessment: whereof ye say, It is desolate without man or beast (אָשֶׁר אַתֶּם אֹמְרִים שְׁמֵמָה הִיא מֵאִין אָדָם וּבְהֵמָה).

It is given into the hand of the Chaldeans (נִתְּנָה בְיַד הַכַּשְׁדִּים)—present tense describes current reality: Babylonian occupation. Yet God declares future commerce will flourish under conditions that seemed permanently terminal. This demonstrates faith's counter-cultural perspective: seeing restoration in ruins, covenant faithfulness in conquest, divine purpose in disaster.

Historical Context

The phrase 'without man or beast' echoes earlier judgment prophecies (4:25, 9:10, 33:10, 12). Archaeological evidence confirms widespread depopulation of Judah after 586 BC—towns destroyed, economy collapsed. The post-exilic returns under Zerubbabel (538 BC) and Ezra (458 BC) began fulfilling this prophecy, though full restoration awaits eschatological completion.

Study Questions

1. What situations in your life appear so devastated that restoration seems impossible?
2. How does resumption of 'ordinary' activities (buying land, doing business) reflect God's comprehensive salvation?
3. Why does God often command faith-actions (like Jeremiah's land purchase) before circumstances change?
